This volume assembles, on one hand, texts from the Belgian corpus based on central Africa and, on the other hand, African texts (Congo, Burundi, Rwanda) written from 1885 through the present. The vision of this book, which reads as an introduction to central Africa, is to privilege long excerpts, assembling them into large, thematic categories and situating them in their context. The crossing of Belgian and African views reproduces the complexity of a history which is accessed thanks to the authors' biographical notes and lexicons.
