A mosaic of approaches from one of the most remarkable African intellectuals of the past half-century, from a critical and shrill conscience that has never ceded to neither sirens, Euro-centrism, nor African nostalgia, from an apparently limpid writer whose fictions dive to the heart of his country, the Congo. A polyphonic, critical work on the occasion of its sixtieth birthday, which deepens the questions considered by African identities after gaining their independences. It is to the reader to decide whether his destiny is written in the "corps glorieux" of his name...
